Workshop

Exception Handling for a 21st Century Programming Language

Aims:

- to share experience on how to build modern systems that have to deal with abnormal situations
- to discuss how solutions to those needs can be developed employing standard Ada features including the current exception handling paradigm
- to propose new exception handling mechanisms / paradigms that can be included in future revisions of the Ada language and also fit high integrity language profiles for safety critical systems

Participation to the workshop is limited to 25-35 individuals and is by invitation upon acceptance of a submission. For further details see the workshop web page:
